The Los Alamos History Award is an annual award that recognizes someone who has made a significant contribution to preserving the world-changing history of our community. Factors that weigh heavily in consideration for the award include depth and breadth of achievement over time, volunteer commitment, and a lasting impact. Both individuals and organizations are eligible. Posthumous awards are not made, and self-nominations are not allowed. The winner is selected by the board of directors of the Los Alamos Historical Society. Therefore, staff and board members are not eligible during the period of their active service.
